We see ourselves as members in your team and want to work together to achieve mutual success while maintaining open lines of communication. This will further allow us to predict future trends while creating the ultimate tanning experience.

Tanning Education Activities & Future Trends

Whether in Europe, North-America or the rest of the world, the LightSources and LightTech does not take a direct selling approach. It is still important for us to maintain and nurture the direct contact with salon professionals. The various trade shows offered during the season are the perfect venue for that. These trade shows allow us the opportunity to educate salon pros about the most innovative products available. At the same time, our team has the chance to listen carefully and learn what ideas work well in what regions, what is fashionable or not fashionable, and what future technologies or solutions are really demanded by the market.

LightSources and LightTech will never rest on their laurels. We have many people around the world working tirelessly to improve the tanning experience, and give our partners the competitive edge. Building the economy is everyone's job, but creating a luxurious and relaxing experience is our added gift!
